

The Franklin Medal of the Congress of the United States, for Distinguished Service in Science, the Humanities, the Arts and Enterprise

1950-1951, Philadelphia Mint
Produced at Liberty Bell Foundry

1000000

© Library of the United States Department of State

This medal, authorized by the House in 1949, is awarded to honor the spirit and character of Benjamin Franklin. It is the symbol of the United States, and is given to those who, through their service, have distinguished themselves in the fields of Science and Enterprise, the Humanities, the Arts and Enterprise. It is a symbol of the United States, and is given to those who, through their service, have distinguished themselves in the fields of Science and Enterprise, the Humanities, the Arts and Enterprise. It is a symbol of the United States, and is given to those who, through their service, have distinguished themselves in the fields of Science and Enterprise, the Humanities, the Arts and Enterprise.

*History cannot give us a program for the future, but can give us a fuller understanding of ourselves and our common community,
so we can better face
the future.*

— ROBERT PENN WARREN
Author, Historian

AMERICA ENGAGED

